CharterUP today announced it ranked 8th on Deloitte's Technology Fast 500™, a ranking of the 500 fastest growing technology, media, telecommunications, life sciences and energy tech companies in North America.

CharterUP CEO Armir Harris credits CharterUP's growth on its continued investment in customer service and technology. "We are honored to rank on Deloitte's Technology Fast 500™. It's humbling to see how much we've grown in such a short amount of time. We've processed hundreds of millions of dollars of trips on our platform and that number keeps increasing," Harris said.

"No one has ever built a transparent motorcoach marketplace like CharterUP. We're creating an 'Expedia for buses.' In one stop, customers can visit our platform, request quotes and see all the bus options in their area right away. There was clearly a hunger in the market for the type of aggregation and booking service CharterUP provides," Harris continued.

To be eligible for Deloitte's Tech Fast 500 recognition, companies must own proprietary intellectual property or technology that is sold to customers in products that contribute to a majority of the company's operating revenues.

While this marks CharterUP's first appearance on the Deloitte Fast 500 list, it has seen consistent revenue growth every year since its inception. "We created CharterUP as a way for bus operators to regain their market share online," Harris said. "It's exciting to see our technology embraced."

About CharterUP

CharterUP is the leading charter bus reservation platform. CharterUP works with 1,000+ bus operators across North America to create an online marketplace for charter bus and shuttle transportation. It is the first and only marketplace to provide real-time data, which allows travelers to charter buses within 60 seconds. CharterUP also offers shuttle service options through its proprietary advanced shuttle management system. Clients such as universities, government agencies and corporations are able to track buses and view real-time bus pricing, ratings and amenities from multiple providers simultaneously. CharterUP's platform technology is the first in the private bus industry, significantly transforming the client experience.
